MESSAGE FROM LEPA'S PRESIDENT

Dear LEPA Members:

I hope everyone had a safe and happy holiday season.

As we begin a new era in state government, I would like to welcome Mr. Mark Cooper who has been appointed by Governor Bobby Jindal to be the director of the Governor's Office of Homeland Security and Emergency Preparedness. Mr. Cooper was a Deputy Fire Chief for Los Angeles County Fire Department. He is a native of Louisiana and a graduate of Louisiana State University. I look forward to meeting with Mr. Cooper in the very near future to discuss emergency management in this state, especially some much needed legislation that this organization has been working toward.

I would also like to welcome all newly elected public officials from the state and local levels of government as well as any new emergency managers who have been recently appointed. I encourage all these new individuals to become a member of LEPA. The board of directors has been working on a seminar for newly appointed directors; this seminar should be completed by the annual workshop.

As we forge ahead in 2008, please pay special note to the fact that the federal government is working on trying to eliminate several key grant funds which assist the local emergency management, local fire and local law enforcement agencies.

The Workshop Committee is working hard to put together the 2008 Annual LEPA/GOHSEP Workshop to be held at the Holiday Inn Select in Baton Rouge from June 2 through June 5, 2008. A reminder that if you have anyone you would like to nominate for an award, the deadline is fast approaching.

Association dues renewals have gone out and it is time to renew your membership in this fine association. We also welcome new members. You can visit our website, www.lepa.org, for more information.

In closing, I would be remiss if I would not congratulate Coach Les Miles and the LSU Fighting Tigers on the victory in the BCS Championship game. They represented the State of Louisiana proudly and they further proved that with not giving up and working as a team, a lot can be accomplished.

Sincerely,

Michael Deroche
President

MESSAGE FROM GOHSEP'S DIRECTOR

As the new Director of Governor's Office of Homeland Security and Emergency Preparedness (GOHSEP), I wish to express how happy and enthused I am to be in the great state of Louisiana and be part of the emergency management family.

After almost 19 years with the Los Angeles County government including sixteen years in emergency management and public safety, I am looking forward to learning from and working with the Louisiana Emergency Preparedness Association (LEPA). Together with other emergency management stakeholders, we can make our State even better prepared for the next natural or man-made disaster.

I am extremely impressed with the significant improvements that have been made in emergency preparedness since the storms of 2005. One significant outcome is the prestigious National Emergency Management Accreditation Program certification that was awarded GOHSEP. This major recognition is due to the leadership and dedication of my predecessor, Col (retired) Jeff Smith and the entire staff of GOHSEP who have worked tirelessly and selflessly with you in moving the agency forward. My goal is to continue building on this momentum by reaching out to emergency management stakeholders across Louisiana in establishing and maintaining close working relationships. GOHSEP is here to support you!

I look forward to meeting each of you and actively supporting the efforts of LEPA.

Sincerely,

Mark Cooper

Iberia Parish/Vermilion Parish Emergency Guide Honored in D.C.

The Iberia Parish/Vermilion Parish Emergency Guide has been honored as one of four national finalists by the PR News Nonprofit Awards Program at a ceremony at the National Press Club in Washington, DC. Jim Anderson, Iberia Parish Director of Homeland Security and Emergency Preparedness, Becky Broussard, Vermilion Parish Director of Homeland Security and Emergency Preparedness, and David Jewell, Vice President of AGL Resources, the company that created the emergency guides in partnership with emergency response and parish governmental leaders, were on hand for the awards luncheon Tuesday. While in the capital, Anderson, Broussard and Jewell met with U.S. Senator Mary Landrieu, Congressman Charles Boustany and the chief of staff for Congressman Charles Melancon to update them on the success of the guide and discuss issues of importance to parish and state emergency response operations.

Public relations initiatives judged as the best in the nation received awards in 18 categories with as many as ten projects in each of 18 industry areas. The Iberia Parish/Vermilion Parish Emergency Guide was one of three crisis planning and response projects to be recognized as honorable mention winners, along with Underwriters Laboratories and the American Veterinary Medical Association response to the 2007 Chinese Pet Food Recall. The American Zoo and Aquarium's international wildlife protection campaign, "Keeping Elephants In Our Future" was named as the national winner among the four finalists.

Entries in the annual PR News' Nonprofit Awards Program are judged by a blue chip panel of non-profit and academic executives, as well as by the staff of PR News. The judges evaluate entries based on creativity, innovation, sound planning and implementation, while making the most important criterion proven success in aligning strategic objectives with established goals.

The Iberia Parish/Vermilion Parish Emergency Guide was published earlier this year through the cooperation of ten parish governmental groups, in partnership with AGL Resources and the Governor's Office of Homeland Security and over 40,000 copies have already been distributed in the two parishes. Copies of the 42-page guide, which covers every major aspect of family natural disaster planning, response, recovery and mitigation are available through the Offices of Homeland Security and Emergency Preparedness, located in the Iberia Parish and Vermilion Parish courthouses.

Anti-terrorism training came just in time for a real event

NCBRT courses are designed to train and prepare first responders in dealing with real-world terrorist and WMD situations. These first responders walk away with valuable knowledge that they may use in the next five months or five years. In the case of the first responders in Anchorage, Alaska who took the Public Safety WMD Response-Sampling Techniques and Guidelines course, their training was put to the test the very next day.

The Sampling course is intended to prepare hazardous materials teams within local and state emergency response agencies to safely and effectively conduct public safety operations at known or suspected WMD incidents. The day after the Sampling course in Anchorage concluded, the city was faced with a white powder incident.

A threatening letter containing a mysterious white powder substance showed up in the attorney general's office. The same first responders, who just a day before were being trained on how to handle an incident such as this one, put their education into action. They made the decision to isolate the substance and lock the area down so there was no chance the substance could contaminate another part of the building. The people inside were not allowed out and the structure's ventilation system was shut off to prevent the substance from spreading. Firefighters wearing hazardous materials suits entered and removed the substance to test it at a state public health lab.

Within hours, the situation was settled and employees were able to leave. The unidentified substance was tested and deemed harmless. Everyone involved stated that the emergency response personnel had the situation under control and everything was handled in a professional and timely manner. This incident reaffirms the importance and necessity of the NCBRT's mission and trainings.

Louisiana Wants You!

New web-site to help the state recruit and manage emergency volunteers.
www.lava.dhh.louisiana.gov

Louisiana is looking for a few good men and women. The Louisiana Department of Health and Hospitals-Office of Public Health recently launched its brand new volunteer management website. LAVA, or Louisiana Volunteers in Action, is the program responsible for recruiting the Department's volunteer workforce (medical and non-medical). The LAVA website will allow individuals to register to volunteer to help the state during health emergencies and day-to-day activities. LAVA provides web-based training to volunteers and information on upcoming volunteer opportunities. It can also be used to deploy volunteers.

Louisiana learned the value of volunteers during Hurricanes Katrina and Rita. Office of Public Health-Center for Community Preparedness Director Doris Brown says more than 8,500 volunteers helped DHH in shelters and clinics across the state. "These volunteers helped supplement the medical work force. We couldn't have gotten through these tragedies without their help." Right now the program has 2,831 volunteers on file. Interested volunteers can sign up at www.lava.dhh.louisiana.gov.

The Federal Government requires states to have volunteer recruitment programs. LAVA is part of the federal program known as Emergency Systems for Advance Registration of Volunteer Health Professionals (ESARVHP). For more information, please contact Mardrah Starks-Robinson, program manager at 225-763-3965.
